The Lake Dunstan Trail reached Cromwell Historic Precinct this week, announcing a clear message to Cromwell that it is on its way.

This section of the trail, which started four kilometres north of Pisa Moorings, will now carry on to the Bannockburn Bridge.

It is expected to reach there towards the end of summer.

This section will then progress to Cornish Point and connect with the teams working from Clyde.

Meanwhile, two contracting firms are working on the trail from Clyde. One contract is for the trail itself, while the other is for the boardwalk 'bolt-ons' around the rock faces.

The work is being completed through the Central Otago Queenstown Trails Trust and is expected to be completed

Brad Pako wins National Woodchopping Championship

By Jan Hawkins

Brad Pako is still grinning after claiming the national 375mm standing woodchopping championship at the recent Canterbury A&P Show.

He also came second in the 375 mm World Underhand Woodchopping Championship, and his team was placed second in the teams' event.

Brad is no stranger to championship success.

The 23-year-old holds the record for the most Under 21 Championships (six consecutive years), taking his first success as a 189-centimetre 14-year-old.

He credits his passion for woodchopping to his late father, taking him to a demonstration by woodcutting great Adam Lowe on the West Coast when Brad was 12 years old.

Brad has been out from injuries and has really enjoyed returning to competition.

"It's just good to be back in the swing of things and competing against some of the best in the world."

Participating in both Otago Axemen's Club and Southland/Otago Axemen's Club keeps Brad busy, and he is off to the Nelson A&P Show this weekend.

He is always quite welcome at friends' property to have a wee practice chopping their wood for them. At home, though, he is happy to have a gas fire.

Brad Pako won a national woodchopping championship and was runner-up in a world title at the Christchurch A&P Show. Photo Jan Hawkins

A constant in his woodchopping successes has been his long-term coach Denis McLaughlin.

Denis is now 80 years old and lives on the West Coast, so Brad does not see him very often.

However, he feels very fortunate to have his guidance and still calls in to see Denis whenever he can.

Denis can get straight to the nub of any problems, which Brad credits to his 'amazing eye'.

Schools, students, and parents prepare for 2020 transition

By Jan Hawkins

The transition from primary school to Cromwell College is an important one for local students, and the whole school community aims to make it as smooth as possible.

The past week has seen the Year 6 students of Goldfields Primary and Cromwell Primary getting familiarised with their 2020 environment

College students held a Q&A session at each primary school, and the week ended with a special day for them at the Cromwell College Aquatics Centre.

The Year 6 cohort from both schools were given a conducted tour of the college by the Year 7 students, and most were impressed and excited by what was on offer.

Cromwell Primary student James Livingstone had his priorities set.

"It looks really good – especially the canteen and the library," he says.

At a follow-up parents meeting at Cromwell College last Thursday evening, his mother Nikki added, "James is following his big brother to the College.

He's definitely ready and looking forward to it."

Principal Mason Stretch opened the meeting by warmly welcoming the parents. "Year 7 students form a special part of our school.

They bring lots of energy and enthusiasm," he said, adding that parents can be assured that their children will be "in really good hands" to support their transition.

The college is expecting approximately 80 Year 7 students to start in February 2020.

by the end of 2020.

Trail Design and Project Manager Dave Howard is impressed with the work completed by Wilson and Keen Contracting.

"It is work of high quality, and the men are respectful and tidy. It is a real credit to them," he says.

The contractors and Dave have found strong enthusiasm for the trail by locals.

"The comments have been overwhelmingly supportive. Most people believe that the trail will be fantastic for the community.

The elderly and young mums with buggies, especially, are anticipating more ways to be social and active, and the benefits on health and wellbeing will be massive," Dave predicts.

Pharmacy scholarship supports young scientists

By Jan Hawkins

During the last decade, Cromwell Pharmacy has supported the region's young students to launch into a career in the sciences by annually gifting a $1,000 cash award and a ten-hour mentoring opportunity to a Cromwell College student for their first year of study.

This year the award goes to Adrienne Lategan, who plans to study Health Sciences at Otago University next year.

Cromwell Pharmacy's Jackie Hamilton says the scholarship is about encouragement in the pursuit of science.

"The scholarship is to encourage Cromwell College students to pursue the sciences at tertiary level.

The purpose is to give a helping hand because coming from a more remote location and moving to the city is a big step."

The mentoring is helpful in this regard because Jackie can draw on her local network to match the student with appropriate local professional sciences.

For Adrienne, who will be involved in the health sciences, Jackie's programme will probably include the pharmacy, a medical centre, the district nurse, the dentist, and a physiotherapist.

"The collaboration in the past has been so heartwarming and really helped the students to understand what is involved in each branch of their intended career."

Adrienne is delighted with the award.

"The collaboration in the past has been so heartwarming and really helped the students to understand what is involved in each branch of their intended career"

of the pharmacy scholarship this year.

I love science and can't wait to pursue it next year at uni," she says, adding, "I'm especially looking forward to the mentoring in January as I think it will be very valuable."

The award is not restricted to the health sciences, so any student in Year 13 at Cromwell College in 2020 looking to study science at tertiary level, is encouraged to research the award through their Dean.

Book on Nevis Valley to be launched at Cromwell Museum

By Jan Hawkins

The first book ever published solely dedicated to the Nevis Valley and the extraordinary people who lived in this beautiful but harsh environment is to be launched at the Cromwell Museum next Thursday evening, December 6.

The book was inspired by the writings of Gavine McLean, who ventured to the Nevis Valley in 1927 to take up a teaching position there, and married Ian McLean several years later.

Ian's family had lived in the valley since 1870, and Gavine wrote about the mining families, the Nevis people in the community, and their stories.

Gavine's son, Lex McLean, of Alexandra, talked to Louise at the 150 years celebrations in the Nevis in 2012, and he asked her to read a little of his mother's manuscripts.

This resulted in Louise's belief that here was an invaluable record of a significant goldfield that had been largely forgotten, and it had to be published.

It was a major work and has taken five years to complete.

"I didn't know what I'd let myself in for," says Louise of her offer to write the book.

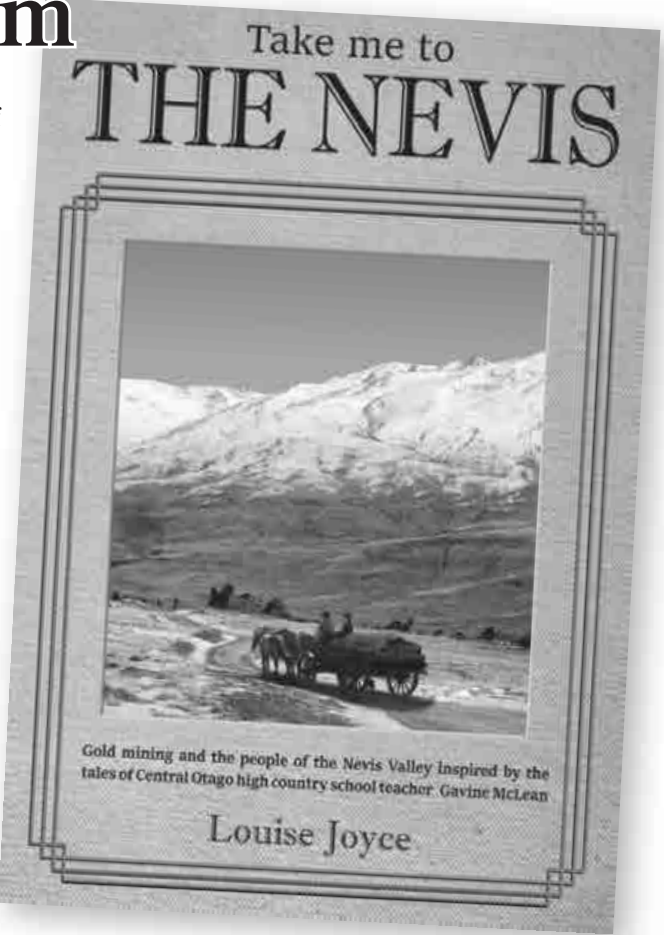

She wove Gavine's stories with thorough research into the Nevis goldfield's era. She is grateful for the assistance of Lex and of Graeme Stewart of Bannockburn, who have collected over the years everything they could find about the Nevis - the valley that is very dear to them both.

Lousie is also thankful for the funding she received for publishing.

"The book would not have been published without the financial support of Promote Dunstan, a not-for-profit community and heritage group operating out of Clyde," says Louise.

The book is available at the Cromwell Museum and the Cromwell iSite for $39.95.

'Take me to The Nevis' by Louise Joyce.

"I didn't know what I'd let myself in for"

Cromwell Festive Fete enjoyed in brilliant sunshine

By Jan Hawkins

People came out in force to the Cromwell Racecourse on Sunday to enjoy the sunny weather, local food and refreshments, and the leisurely shopping experience at the ninth annual Cromwell Festive Fete.

Organiser Anthea Lawrence was delighted with the day.

"This was the best year we've had numbers-wise, because of the wonderful weather," says Anthea, adding, "The stall holders too were amazing this year, and people really enjoyed the music."

There were over 120 stalls, with wares ranging from health products, crafts, specialty foods, and Christmas decorations, to furniture, homeware and clothing.

After eight years of providing their distinctive red and white bags, organisers have phased them out, deciding that people now have an array of shopping bags, and they did not need to add 'to the vast number of bags that get produced each year'.

Instead, they intend to make a cash donation to a local charity.

Anthea would like to thank St John's ambulance, Central and South Kids Educational Trust, the Fine Thyme Belles and all the entertainers and helpers who enhanced the experience of the fete. In particular, she appreciates the park-like setting of the Cromwell Racecourse.

"We just had a wonderful time, and everyone I spoke to, stallholders and shoppers, did too," says Anthea.

How old is old?

Over the weekend, the National Party selected a 17-year-old to be their candidate for Palmerston North for next year's General Election.

The Year 13 student from Palmerston North Boys High is apparently a very good student debater, loves going to youth political events and ... and ... that's about it.

Now the last time that Palmerston North elected a National MP was when the last Ice Age was upon us. No, I lie. It was about the time that a massive asteroid struck the earth and wiped out the dinosaurs.

So, plainly, the National Party is not expecting that young William Wood is going to save the world. Any more than Greta Thunberg is going to do.

But this was also the week that 71-year-old former New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg entered the Democrat primary race for the US election. To try and unseat Donald Trump – now aged 73 years. Bloomberg's main Democrat party competition are all aged in their early to mid-70s. Dear Lord.

Now there's nothing wrong with being 70-something. I intend to be one day, and I'll be telling all of my children and grandchildren how intelligent and aware I am. If only because if I don't, they'll select some nice rest home for me and be claiming power of attorney.

But you get my drift. When I was young, sixty was old. Seventy was Methuselah stuff. Slippers, a walking stick, and a large whisky before bed.

But typical of we babyboomers, we are not going gently into the night. We are being rather obstinate about it all. And rightly so.

Because we have learned that life experience isn't just a phrase. That it does make you smarter. Less judgemental even. More aware that not everyone is the same, nor has the same experience nor ability to cope with the real life that invades through their front door. In other words, we've grown up.

But for all that, we don't have the same energy, enthusiasm, nor insight of our youth. We probably aren't the best people to lead bowling clubs, let alone the most powerful nation on earth.

So good luck 17-year-olds, if you want to stand for our local council or be our local MP. We will probably elect you. Just for the sheer Hell of it. And you probably won't do a worse job than us!

Subdividing land

Subdividing land is the process creating two or more sections from one original allotment. Whether your current section is too big, has been rezoned or you have a large greenfield site that you are considering developing, there are a number of steps involved in creating separate titles.

For a property to be subdividable, you must first meet the requirements of your local council's district plan. Specific to your region, district plans include the different planning controls and development standards that regulate things like the minimum size of a section, maximum sizes of buildings and their positions in relation to boundaries, vehicle access (driveways) and parking requirements.

When it comes to most urban subdivisions there are three common types: fee simple, unit title and cross-lease, and each has different rules around ownership of the titles they create.

Having made the decision to subdivide, it's time to get in touch with one of our planners or surveyors to get the ball rolling. A surveyor will start by measuring your property to prepare a plan that will be part of your application to the council for consent, and planners will use that plan when they help you through the application process.

Should the need for servicing arise, you may need to bring in engineer as well, but by choosing to work with Baseline Group you have access to all three services. As experts in developments large and small, we're able to walk you through the process so that you're well informed from the start.
